Conference Newsletter of the Pacific
Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers
Spokane, Washington

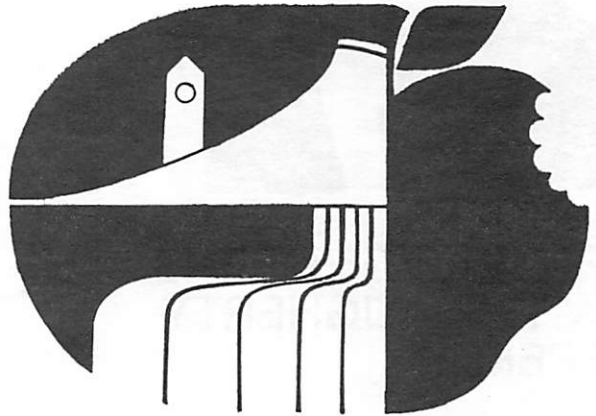

November 5-8, 1978

PRESIDENT'S WELCOME

On behalf of your executive committee, I welcome you to the "Lilac City" and the 52nd annual meeting of the Pacific Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers. Matt Telin, General Conference Chairman, and Tim Washburn, Program Chairman, along with the many people on the various working committees, have planned an outstanding conference for us. The program offers variety and stimulation, while the setting and the social activities planned afford us the opportunity to renew acquaintances and learn from each other informally.

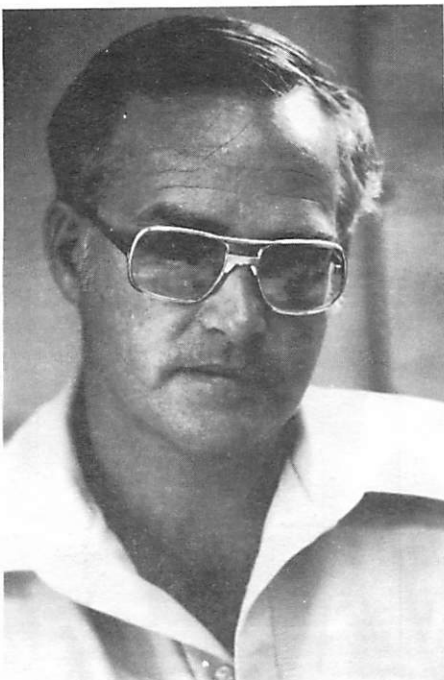

We extend a special welcome to those of you who are attending your first PACRAO conference. Please mingle freely with your colleagues during the conference and let your interest in becoming actively involved in PACRAO be known. The association needs the contribution of new members and your active participation will be welcomed.

I believe we have an excellent conference planned, but you can make it better. GET TO THE CORE OF THE ISSUE!!

Logo for Spokane Conference

The PACRAO Conference Committee invites the membership to join in extending appreciation to the advertising class at Spokane Falls Community College for the excellent art work from which the Spokane Conference logo was selected. The graphic which was chosen as best capturing the Conference theme of "Getting To The Core Of The Issue" was done by Ted Moon, who receives a special "thanks."

NEW MEMBER ORIENTATION

Mildred Scott, the immediate past president of PACRAO, will share some ideas on what PACRAO can do for its members and what PACRAO can do for AACRAO. A question and answer period will follow. PACRAO President Gene Omev will provide the hospitality.

PACRAO 78 OPENS WITH DAUGHERTY SPEECH

The opening session on Sunday evening, November 5, will be highlighted by an address from Dr. Richard D. Daugherty, professor of anthropology and director of the Washington Archaeological Research Center at Washington State University. Dr. Daugherty, one of the nation's foremost archaeologists, will speak on "Early Man In Washington."

He was Director of Excavations at the famous Marmes Rockshelter on the Palouse River in 1962, and since 1970 has directed excavations at the Ozette Archaeological site — often called "Pompeii of the Western World" — at Cape Alava on the Northwest Washington coast.

He was a nominee for president of the Society for American Archaeology in 1975, and in 1977 was named "Outstanding Scientist" by the Northwest Scientific Association.

A native Washingtonian, Daugherty attended Central Washington University and finished his undergraduate work at the University of Washington. He later earned the Ph.D. from the U of W.

Daugherty probably knows the archaeological history of the state of Washington better than anyone. In 1947 he conducted an archaeological survey of the entire coastal area of Washington and also surveyed 14 reservoir areas in Washington, Idaho and Montana for the Smithsonian Institution. Since that time he has opened up numerous excavation sites in the Pacific Northwest.

A member of the faculty at WSU since 1950, Daugherty served as Chairman of the Department of Anthropology and has been Director of the Washington Archaeological Research Center at the University since its establishment here in 1972.

In 1971, Daugherty was the recipient of "The Governor's Arts Award" presented by the Washington State Arts Commission (with the Makah Nation). He and noted Tacoma journalist-author Ruth Kirk won the first place award for "Hunters of the Whale" as the best science book ages 7-14 by the New York Academy of Sciences in 1974.

BUSTAD FEATURED AT PRESIDENT'S LUNCHEON

Dr. Leo K. Bustad, Dean of the College of Veterinary Medicine at Washington State University will speak on "How To Listen and Who To Listen To" at the President's luncheon on Monday, November 6.

Dr. Bustad holds three degrees from WSU and received his Ph.D. in physiology from the University of Washington School of Medicine. In 1958 he was a National Science Foundation postdoctoral fellow there.

Dr. Bustad holds or has held committee assignments and council positions in many national organizations, both governmental and private. He is presently a member of the National Advisory Committee for the University of Washington Regional Primate Center and Chairman of the Committee on Veterinary Medical Sciences of the National Academy of Sciences/National Research Council. He serves as a consultant to the Surgeon General of the U.S. Air Force. His community service has included terms as a member of the Board of Regents of California Lutheran College; of the Board of Directors for Holden Village, an international retreat center where he is also part-time scientist-in-residence and chairman of the Science Advisory Committee; of the Board of Governors of the Institute of Human Ecology.

He performed and directed radiation biologic research at Hanford Laboratories, Richland, Washington, from 1949 to 1965 and then served on the faculty of the University of California, Davis, until taking his present post at WSU in 1973.

Dean Bustad has authored or coauthored over 200 articles and reports on education, nutrition, radiation, cancer, laboratory animal medicine, and comparative medicine. He also has taught in schools of medicine, veterinary medicine, and environmental sciences on the subjects of radiation biology, cancer, physiology, gerontology, and bioenvironmental aspects of energy utilization. He frequently speaks on these and other subjects.
